is the Joe's Special. A very similar competitor to the Pork Bahn Mi, the main difference is in lieu of pork loin, the Joe's Special comes with spicy capicola. The capicola is topped with lettuce, tomato and garlic aioli with melted provolone cheese. Just like the Bahn Mi, the Joe's Special is a sandwich for someone with a working man's hunger. Pair it with any beer you'd like and find yourself in culinary heaven.

I am not just talking these great dishes up for my health. No, dear reader, I encourage you to go out and track down these titans of meat, bread and veggies. Seriously, a Big Mac combo runs about the same price as any of these dishes with 10 times the guilt, so go out and be a locavore!

Wich Trials Number 2 features two dishes with pork products that will make you squeal for more. In the red corner, from Fuse at the corner of 10th and Broad, we have the Pork Bahn Mi. This consists of very thick cuts of pork loin topped with fresh veggies and garlic aioli, which make this a very simple yet filling and delectable sandwich. It goes well with any beer from Fuses ever-changing selection; I enjoyed mine with a thick chocolate stout, which may have been a bad choice, because after a monster sandwich and a very filling beer I was near immobile, but very satisfied.

In the blue corner, fighting out of Joe's Underground at 8th and Broad,

FOOTBALL PREDICTIONS

A football issue would not be complete unless our sports "experts" made a few predictions for our local college and pro favorites. By experts, we mean experts at drinking beer while watching over 20 hours of football every weekend; nevertheless, this is how we think the season will shake out.

SBC Georgia Bulldogs
2015 Record: 10-3
 Apparently winning 10 games was not enough to save the last head coach's job at UGA, despite his diving prowess. A new first-year head coach and the possibility of relying on a freshman quarterback makes our team very cautious to expect greatness. We predict the Bulldogs will go 7-5 in the regular season with the chance to win a bowl game.

South Carolina Gamecocks
2015 Record: 3-9
 South Carolina's 2015 season was a heartbreaker with The Old Ball Coach leaving mid-season and a loss to the Citadel. The only way to go is up so games. However, they will slip up on one team Clemson will return with some major role players and the momentum of a championship run that came up one game short. Couple that with a cupcake schedule out of the ACC and we think the Tigers will win most of their regular season games. However, they will slip up on one team

ACC Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets
2015 Record: 3-9
 The 2015 roster was plagued with injuries as the rambli' wreck spit and sputtered its way to only 3 wins. However, many key role players for the triple option will return, including a 385 pound offensive guard. Better offensive line play and less competition from their conference gives us the feeling that Tech will be much improved. We predict a 7-5 record with a bowl game for the Yellow Jackets.

Clemson Tigers
2015 Record: 14-1
 Clemson will return with some major role players and the momentum of a championship run that came up one game short. Couple that with the Tigers will win most of their regular season games. However, they will slip up on one team this year, we predict a decent 6-6 season with a chance for a bowl win.

NFL Falcons
2015 Record: 8-8 (missed playoffs)
 2015 was an emotional roller coaster for dirty bird fans. It proved that if the Falcons are anything, they are streaky. They also carry a history of mediocrity into the 2016 season, which should be better than usual thanks to some defensive acquisitions and more offensive line experience. We predict a 9-7 regular season with a chance to sneak into the playoffs as a wild card.

Panthers
2015 record: 15-1 (NFC Champions)
 The Panthers are coming into 2016 fresh off a Super Bowl loss which was attributed to a very stiff Denver defense. Although the Panthers almost went undefeated in the regular season, many of those victories appeared to be eked out. Our experts are hesitant to think they will be that lucky this year. We predict a 10-6 regular season with an NFC South title and a playoff berth. There is the caveat.

We sit sliding down the back of a historical dragon. The world does not give two solitary fucks if you are strapped in. We are all just along for the ride down a novel and ever evolving rail. Fractals reappear as the scale gets tighter. Folding in on each other. Increasing order. Building on novelty already achieved. The momentum of history is far too great. To dig one's heels in the ground would only assure bloody nubs to stand upon. Yet, I look out and see a thousand with two thousand bloody nubs stamping their bloody nubs and crying foul. We cannot slow it, but we can chart the course. Only so much as everyone's intent is just and synchronous. There is the caveat.

Breakfast, Part Two

Sheena Smith

His eyes open to the realization that his head is soaked. She left the window open again all night and it had rained early that morning and dripped onto his rough cheeks and puddled his long blonde hair into his pillow. The smell of coffee and eggs wafts through the small, dim room.

He gets up and finds her singing and cooking at the stove. His arms wrap around her and he kisses her neck.

"What time do you leave, my love?" she asks with sadness in her voice as she sets a plate of the most beautifully sunny eggs on the table.

"The boat sets out at twilight."

They spend the morning talking over breakfast, something they did every morning. Strong, black coffee and bacon. Sunny side ups and pancakes today. He can taste love in each delicious bite.

After their meal, he spent that last afternoon making love to her in their rain soaked bed, taking in every last moment with her. Memorizing her face again and again.

And again.
